

The Richard house overlooks the water at York Harbor. It is low and extended, with many large windows insuring comfort in warm weather. The details of the hooded doorway are extremely lovely, and its Colonial simplicity is in harmony with the conservativeness of the house

The summer residence of Harold C. Richard, Esq., at York Harbor, Maine

MILLBURY MEADOW

The main hall has so friendly and cordial an air that guests must feel at home as soon as they set foot inside the house. The wallpaper is creamy yellow with a block design, and striped chintz with a salmon colored background is used for curtains. The stairs are in an alcove to the right

Pale yellow walls and woodwork are refreshing in the Richard living room. Much of the furniture is covered by a green chintz having a hollyhock design. Blue-green damask on a Chippendale sofa and red satin on a barrel chair by the fireplace emphasize these colors in the chintz

The room for the son of the family has a cream wallpaper in which a small diamond design is picked out in green and red. The chintz bears a multi-colored Cape Cod design of ships and seas and landscapes, and the ship panel over the mantel would delight the masculine heart of any age

Maple furniture is used in the bedroom of Mr. Richard's daughters, wherein apricot, green, and tête-de-nègre are pleasantly combined, and the four-poster beds are draped in cream dotted Swiss with ball fringe. In this room, as elsewhere in the house, hooked rugs are used instead of carpet

Exposed ceiling beams and old pine paneling on the walls feature the library, a room whose subdued colors are lightened by gay figured orange linen on the sofa and yellow binding on the brown chintz curtains. Old maple furniture finds here a suitable background

Outdoor eating is quite a part of our life nowadays, and the Richard family use this enclosed porch for that purpose. The floor is of terra cotta tile, the walls are a soft dark green, and the white chintz of the curtains bears an attractive tiger-lily design with tracings of red
